Greetings!

The other day I was sitting in a coffee shop waiting for a meeting to begin. I was doing my best to catch up on a few emails while I had some free time, but I found myself drawn to the conversation at the table behind me. It was a man and a woman who were in the middle of some “church talk”. You know it’s “church talk” when two people meet in public to discuss their opinions on the parish, elders, and worship (Greek to the rest of the people in the coffee shop). During their conversation, which I was trying not to overhear, the man said to the woman; “you know, some people think, if you want new people to come, you have to start doing things differently. I just don’t see it that way.” Sound familiar? It brings to mind an overused cliché describing insanity, “doing the same thing over and expecting a different result!” I did my best to hold my tongue.

Fortunately, this wasn’t one of our churches.

The other week I had the honor and opportunity to sit down with the PNC (Pastor Nominating Committee) from Warner Memorial to engage in some “church talk”. Their PNC asked me if I would be a reference on their MIF (Ministry Information Form, what churches use to call a new pastor). Before I said yes, I wanted to get to know them a little more and hear what kind of pastor they were looking for.

It was refreshing to hear them talk about the dreams they had for their congregation. I met with a collection of dedicated members of the church, faithfully considering their congregation and community. Their PNC was outward facing. They realized their church sat in the middle of an ever-changing community they weren’t fully in relationship with. The PNC was clear their marker of success with their new pastor would be how well they engaged the neighborhood that surrounded them.

This PNC was putting the needs of those who have never set foot in their doors on the same level as members who had been there for decades. They were honest and realistic. They are aware of the sacred cows and potential land mines that their new pastor would have to navigate. However, their focus remained centered on “what could be.”

As I visit our churches around the Presbytery, I encounter leaders who are ready to take full stock of the gifts their congregation has to offer to the world and their community. They are ready to make room for Christ to lead them into what they will be next.

December 12, 2019

Greetings,

Expectations are coming! Expectations are coming! Expectations are coming! Whew, now that I have that anxiety out of the way, I am grateful to each of our churches, communities and leadership that are pacing us through this Advent season. Thank you for the services, music, devotions, and wreath lighting rituals you have so diligently put together. It takes all your attention to remind many of us to be in this sacred space with a sacred pace. Thank you!

On the Longest Night, December 20th – 21st, the homeless advocacy community of DC will hold their annual memorial service and remembrances for sisters and brothers who have died in the year due to homelessness. This sacred time is a strong intersection of the business of justice and advocacy in the embrace of God's belovedness for so many who have found no room in the "Inn". Let us hold onto the sacredness that is necessary in all of God's justice and advocacy.

Coming in February, our NCP staff, NCP minister members, NCP Christian Educators, and spouses are invited to join the annual Calm to the Waves Retreat, Feb. 3-5. The links are within this TM. This annual gathering is only a part of how the Care Team of the Committee on Ministry seeks ways to connect and check in with one another. The Care Team also holds sacred space for clergy at every Presbytery Meeting during Open Space. This is a time you can come in and visit with one of the Care Team leaders and Mentors so that you are supported in making effective connections in NCP.

February 6th-8th, members of Leadership Council and our Stated Clerk will be part of the Mid-Atlantic Synod Pilgrimage to Montgomery, AL. Within our presbytery a few leaders and congregations have been on similar pilgrimages. We look forward to holding sacred spaces as we welcome the intentional work of learning, re-learning, and dis-mantling racism within our own church systems. More information will be shared on ways to support these key leaders through our prayers and invitations.

Again, I thank each of you for the intentionality you bring in marking this season with sacred space, sacred rituals, and sacred pacing! We are not alone. Hope abounds that we can be with. We get to share with so many that God is with us and for us!

Peace and Courage,

Rev. Tara Spuhler McCabe

This film frames gun violence as a public health epidemic by taking an in-depth look at how one shooting impacts individuals, families and communities. In the documentary, all those scarred by gun violence eventually arrived at the same question: "Why did this happen to us?" After looking at the devastation of gun violence, Trigger turns its attention to the bigger question:

"What can we do to prevent gun violence?"

David Barhhart (invited) – Director/Producer of Trigger will moderated a Q&A Discussion

Background

In the 2006 General Assembly, Presbyterians resolved to seek to lead “Carbon Neutral Lives.” Fourteen years later, it is now time for that seeking to bear fruit worthy of repentance. In 2008, the PC(USA) proclaimed the “Power to Change”, asking the U.S. government to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions (GHGs) 20% from 1990 levels by 2020 and 80% by 2050. It is now 2020, and U.S. GHGs have likely increased, rather than decreased. Further, the GHG reduction timeline proclaimed in 2008 is now inadequate to sufficiently limit global temperature increase brought about by new and lingering GHGs (cf. UN Emissions Gap Report 2019). Today, the impacts of failure to see beyond the horizon of nonrenewable, fossil fuels and the failure to mobilize around an urgent date for reaching netzero GHG emissions are increasingly unconscionable. Thus, in 2018 the PC(USA) proclaimed that “The Earth is the Lord’s” and urged courageous moral leadership on climate with transformational, incarnational climate action. Therefore, YCAP is counting GHGs to outline pathways to NetZero emissions in the National Capital Presbytery and the PC(USA). We ask for your help.

The National Capital Presbytery began a pilot year of YCAP in 2017-2018. The inaugural youth carbon analysts formulated an estimate of the GHG emissions from the buildings of the ten congregations in the Earth Care Network and they assessed the scale of renewable energy projects that would be necessary to achieve netzero GHG emissions for those congregations. The current YCAP program seeks to expand the foundational work of the inaugural analysts by involving more congregations in order to formulate a more precise estimate of the total GHG emissions in the presbytery and to draft a climate action plan.
